The Hall Log House is a two story log dwelling with a later frame addition. It is two bays long and three deep. There is an inside end chimney in the west gable end. The log is covered by asbestos shingles and clapboard. A two bay by two bay addition was built on the north wall of the log structure in the late 1800's. It has a stove chimney in its gable end. There is a one story porch on the eastern side of this section which has Victorian posts and brackets. The entire house has a stone foundation and a cellar under the log portion. The roof is covered with sheets of metal roofing and has a box cornice. The sash is 2/2.
